It is expected that Senator Smith of Maryland, chairman of the subcommit tee, will call hearings immediately, and representatives of Washington's leading business organizations are ex pected to appear to combat the man ner in which the House treated the half-and-half plan.

The District bill went through th House yesterday with no record vote until Representative Mann of Illinois minority leader, moved to recommit th measure to the committee with instructions to bring it out again on the half and-half basis. On this vote the demo crats defeated Representative Mann 173 'present." Several of the latter would have voted for the half-and-half had hey not been paired with absentees.

Analysis of the Vote.

An analysis of the vote shows that fourteen democrats voted with the re publicans for Mr. Mann's motion, and that twenty-five republicans voted with the democrats in opposing the motion.
The former were Representatives

The debate on the District of Columbia appropriation bill at this session of Congress developed the fact that plan until the House have a firm belief in the efficacy and justice of the half-and-half plan, and will stick to that plan until the House sets up an adequate substitute.

Among these are the minority leader, Representative Mann of Illinois, who laid down a policy of most generous proportions to be used by the appropriations to be used by the appropriations to be used by the appropriation to he used by the appropriation of the half-and-half principle of appropriating for the District.

Before the bill left the House yester day Representative Mondell offered an amendment to provide for the purchase of the Dean and Patterson properties for public park purposes. He defended both items, of course, but they were stricken out on a point of order brought by Representative Page of North Carolina. Representative Mann was particularly interested in the Dean tract, and said, in discussing it:

The lengthening of the new pier at Wilkerson's wharf, Va., is about completed and when ready for service the steamers of the Potomac and Chesapeake was particularly interested in the Dean tract, and said, in discussing it:

"I look over this property every morning. I have looked at it for many years, going by it. There is not a morning now that I do not stand at my window and look at that piece of property. It is the haundsomest piece of property. It is the haundsomest piece of property that I ever saw in a city. I do not know what the government would do with it if it purchased it. I do not think there is great necessity for an additional park in that locality. But there is one oak tree on the Dean property that ought to be owned by the government and surrounded, so that the people could go under it. It is many times older than the city of New York. There is no tree anywhere near New York city that is as old or as large as this old oak tree on the Dean place, which has a wider spread than any tree in any other city in the United States. They nave a tree out in the Hawaiian Islands, planted by a man still living, that has a spread larger than this room; but I know of no place where they have as handsome an old oak tree as there is right by the Dean house, directly in front of the windows of my apartment. If I had the money I would buy the ground myself for the privilege of living under the shadow of that old oak tree."

reached the Senate we must act first there by speaking or writing to senators and asking them to read the report of the joint committee of Congress on the fiscal relation and the report of the special committee of the Board of Trade, adopted Thursday inght.

"The rider is absolutely inconsistent with the spirit and letter of the report of the joint committee of Congress. The Board of Trade report shows exactly how the rider differs from the legislation recommended by the joint committee of Congress. There are new senators to whom the facts are practically unknown. All of the senators will be glad to receive practical suggestions as to dealing with this vital matter. We can trust the wisdom and fairness of the Senate. It defeated a similar rider last year. At that time the rider had some support in the Senate ate on account of misleading statements as to District of Columbia taxation, which had been made in House. But now the joint committee of Congress has unanimously accepted the facts presented by the joint citizents committee, which demolished the foundations of those misleading statements.

Detail for Court.

The detail for the court follows: Col. Edward A. Millar, 3d Field Artillery; Col. Jacob G. Galbraith, cavalry; Lieut. Col. J. E. Muchert, 4th Texas Infantry; Maj. A. R. Sisson, Small, Thomas, Whaley and Wilson (III.).

The pair clerk's record shows that Representative Sisson of Mississippi was paired with Representative Wilson, republican, of Illinois, for and against this motion specifically; Representative Austin, republican, Tennessee, for the motion, paired with Representative Stedman of South Carolina, democrat, against; Representative Whaley of South Carolina, democrat, against the motion with Representative Coady of Baltimore, a democrat, and a former member of the District committee, who has always stood for the half-and-half plan. Representatives Ayres, democrat, of Kansas, was paired against the motion with Representative Dyer of Missouri, republican, for the motion. The other pairs were general, and along party lines.

Present Taxation Adequate.

"The joint committee of Congress of Senate Subcommittee nanimously found that the present District taxation was adequate and should not be increased so as to make the District taxpayers bear the whole handling the District appropriation bill or the greater part of the expenses of the common capital. There now is no reason for supporting the rider on that ground. This must be brought distinctly to the attention of senators. Then they must be pointed to the recommendations of the joint committee of Congress that the appropriations for the development and maintenance of the National Capital should be 'definite' and 'regular' and 'liberal.' This means, of course, that if the half-and-half plan is to be abolished there must be substituted for it another equally 'definite and regular,' and that the appropriations under it shall be 'liberal.' the common capital. There now is no mediately upon that measure, which was received by the Senate today from tee on appropriations. Senator Smith Senators Owen, Lea of Tennessee and Robinson, democrats, and Senators Gallinger, Dillingham and Curtis, republi-cans.
